

An Improved Electronic Device

ABSTRACT

The present invention generally relates to an improved electronic device, which comprises a case having a containing room, a container for reserving electronic device and embedded in the containing room for electrical engagement, an electrical structure being an interface between the case and the container. Therefore, in the needs of changing power-supply components or power-consumption components are simply to dismantle the container, and the components can then be changed very easily.